

5.15. The ball follows path C as it emerges from the tube. The centripetal force keeping it moving in a circle within the tube is the normal force exerted by the tube wall on the ball. When that force is removed, the ball moves in a straight line in accordance with Newton's first law with the last velocity it had, which was tangential to the circle.